Alessandro Manfredini EAU DE PARFUM

Sculptor, graphic artist, silver bearded model, Alessandro Manfredini is a survivor, a gentleman who fought to rebuild his spirit when an earthquake destroyed his dreams. His collaboration with Captain Fawcett is rich with memory, producing a most seductive Eau De Parfum evocative of Italy's capricious seasons. Woody spiced top notes of rosemary & star anise combine with mid notes of fresh green cyclamen on a bed of mineral ambergris, calming cedarwood & sun toasted tonka. In truth, a simply magnificent alchemic fragrance has been created for your pleasure. Evviva!

Moments float like fragrance, entwined in time. There is a boy in the orchard, under the fig trees, watching beetles in jewelled light.

Sweet hours of heat, ripening fruit, rich earth. Scent of my land.

The land that raised me, the land that broke me, the land that restored me to life.

Time passes.

Memory holds.

Perfume lingers.

We are renewed.

I was a carefree boy, fascinated by beetles, always working to mysterious rhythms, following the seasons in their slow circles, tinged with the colours of dreams.

A magical insect, ancient talisman of strength and regeneration.

I did not know then, that as a man I would lose everything and survive.

You may say the beetle is my spirit animal. You may say the beetle brings faith in tomorrow.

LAUNCHING OCTOBER 2020

John Petrucci's virtuoso composition with Captain Fawcett is quite simply out of this world. Top notes of exhilarating bergamot & aromatic myrtle riff with a bittersweet tang of grapefruit, rising to an intense heart of earthy, violet orris, dark coffee & tenacious woody cedar. A finale of seductive musk trails a backbeat laced with smoky vetiver & luxurious leather. This melodic collaboration has produced a work of true majesty.

The first 3000 purchasers of a 50ml Nebula Beard Oil from www.captainfawcett.com will receive a Limited Edition Nebula Guitar FLOW® Pick, designed and created by John Petrucci in collaboration with Jim Dunlop.

Several years ago I was given Captain Fawcett's Moustache Wax Cornucopia as a gift from my wife Rena. I was immediately drawn in by the amazing scents, quality of the product, beautiful presentation \mathcal{E} whimsical creative lore present throughout the design. I instantly became a die-hard fan & loyal customer. Years later I received an email from The Captain. A member of his crew, who happened to be a guitar player & a Dream Theater fan, recognized my name on an order. Through some coordinated social media posts, the beginnings of a new creative relationship took root. As a professional musician, I truly believe that the most successful & artistically rewarding partnerships happen organically & this was no different. At the end of February 2020, I finally met Corey, the aforementioned guitarist at Dream Theater's show in London & told him that if The Captain was ever interested in developing a Signature Beard Oil with a certain bearded guitarist, I'd be onboard in a heartbeat! And there you have it... a few weeks later we had our first Skype meeting. I met The Captain's Right-Hand Man and a few members of his brilliant artistic team \mathscr{O} we were immediately discussing everything from scents to packaging to launch ideas. I could tell from that very moment that our creative partnership would most definitely yield something incredibly special & just like that, the John Petrucci Nebula Signature Series became a reality!

CAT.REF: CF 0192/B Razor Blade Wrappers

Travelling salesman King Camp Gillette developed the first disposable Razor Blade with MIT metallurgist William Emery Nickerson, patented in 1904. With the razors' packaging depicting his own mousta-chioed likeness, Gillette became something of a celebrity and by 1908 profits exceeded $13,000,000. When the patent expired in 1921 a host of competitors began manufacturing blades and the hobby of collecting wrappers was born.

CAT.REF: CF_0167/F Shaving Kit

Until 1916, British Army regulations stipulated all soldiers must wear a moustache but have clean-shaven chins and so letters sent home from the Front often requested mirrors, razors and strops alongside the comfort of warm socks and chocolate. This is the Shaving Kit of Sgt Adams, a Motorcycle Despatch Rider in the Royal Flying Corps during the First World War. 4,365 men of the Royal Flying Corps died in service and although his Shaving Kit survived the conflict, Sgt Adams' own fate remains unknown.

CAT.REF: CF_3 18/K Personal Shaving Mug

In days of old it was customary for a gentleman to visit his barber for a wet shave. Soap was placed in a personalised mug and kept safely at the barbershop along with a chap's own razor. Such mugs, often with gilt or floral designs were popular coming of age gifts for young men. This one, named for Henry Cole, is American, dated 1941, the year of Pearl Harbour. What story might it tell?

CAT.REF: CF_0728/E Sterling Silver Shaving Cup 1899

The shaving scuttle was first patented in the Victorian era when running hot water was uncommon. Water from a kettle was poured into the wide spout and shaving soap rested upon the top of the cup, thus providing convenient means to achieve a hot lather. This exquisite example was made by Henry Matthews, a renowned silversmith skilled in creating fine household objects and greatly onets and swords. In 1898 they diversified to develop precision instruments including safety razors. One of the most successful was the Empire Razor Set series, manufactured from 1930 until 1952. The Empire Series featured an innovative self-stropping mechanism and roller guard ensuring a smooth shave Sets were made in single, two or three blade form and also in deluxe seven day sets with the days of the week engraved on the spine of the blades.

Peter the Great, returning from years exploring Europe in disguise, was keen to modernise his empire by taxing the beards of Russia gentlemen. Should a chap be reluctant to expose his chin to the elements, he was able to preserve his hirsute pride by paying for a token to prove his beard was worn with approval of the Tsar. When the tax was abolished in 1772 'beard kopeks' were melted down, thus are vanishingly rare and, as such, nigh on priceless. This example, it must be noted, is a reproduction.

CAT.REF: CF_0102/A Dressing Case

What were the travelling requisites of the 19TH century gentleman? A modern chap carries a rather pared down kit in contrast to his historical counterpart Indeed, lavishly stocked dressing cases were de rigueur and contained an array of wondrous implements from familiar shaving essentials to glove stretchers, itton hooks, curling tongs and razor strops, often crafted in ebony, ivory, silver, cut glass, mother-of-pearl and tortoise shell. No wonder the well groomed explorer or soldier required such a retinue of servants and porters

Mhat a Mill.

A Triumphant collaboration between Captain Fawcett and actor, comedian & all round good egg Rufus Hound has resulted in this rather splendid Eau De Parfum. A delightful fragrance somewhat reminiscent of the balmy days of Spring; olfactory rural stimuli reaped whilst riding his beloved motorcycle thru England's green & pleasant countryside.

A heady perfume boasting top notes of Bergamot, Lime & Ylang, mid notes of Blackcurrant, Clove & Galbanum supported by the earthier base notes of Sandalwood, Ambergris & Musk.

BOOZE & BACCY

It is the Captain's great pleasure to partner World renowned Dandy & Gentleman about town and Barbersride Companion of the Road, Mr Ricki Hall in concocting this delectable bespoke Eau De Parfum.

Top notes of bay rum, zesty orange & bergamot combine with luxuriant base notes of honeyed fresh tobacco leaves, dusty aromatic frankincense, maple-like benzoin & warm exotic vanilla bean & layered with mid notes of fresh galbanum, white thyme & coriander.

Barberism

A blend of tradition and contemporary style informs Captain Fawcett's bond with Barber Educator Sid Sottung. Together they have produced a most outstanding Eau De Parfum, a timeless & yet refreshingly elegant scent with top notes of Lime & Orange, mid notes of Rose & Galbanum along with the earthier base notes of Cedarwood, Patchouli & Musk.

In truth, a simply delightful alchemic concoction has been created for your delectation... Huzzah!
